PROMOTING YOUR EDUCATION AND PREVENTION PROJECT

Your commitment to alcohol education and prevention is important to share with your community. Not only does it showcase the work that you are doing, but it raises awareness about what is being done to create a healthier community. Additionally, it can help to increase attendance at your events and programs, and widen your reach.

The purpose of this toolkit is to provide resources and information to any group, organization or individual looking to promote an education or prevention project. In order to share your project goals and activities with others, you need to develop a communications plan. This plan will serve as the roadmap for promoting your project with a list of tactics needed to accomplish your goals. With the most efficient strategies and tactics implemented, you can easily and effectively spread your message and succeed in informing others about your project.

The purpose of this toolkit is to provide resources and information to any group, organization or individual looking to promote an education or prevention project.
CREATING YOUR COMMUNICATIONS PLAN

As with any project, there are aspects within your plan that you need to determine.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>GOAL: The big picture statement explaining what you want to accomplish.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ Your goal should reflect the greater mission of your media campaign and how it relates to the goals of your overall project.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>OBJECTIVE: Objectives are specific and measurable outcomes of each goal you plan to implement.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ Your objectives should be your expected success, such as reaching 100 students at all the high schools in the county with a prevention message.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>STRATEGIES: How you plan to accomplish your goal.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ Your strategies need to outline what you are going to do in order to succeed at promoting your project. They should be a broad plan of action that will help you reach your objectives, such as a media relations strategy, community relations strategy, events strategy or social media strategy.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TACTICS: Specific tasks that carry out the strategy.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ i.e., a news release, poster, social media post, etc.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>AUDIENCES: Who you are going to target.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ You should focus your messages and strategies specifically on the group you want to impact or to take action as a result of your campaign.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TIMELINE: How long will the campaign last and what needs to be accomplished each day, week and month.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ By having a schedule in place and assigning tasks to team members, there is more accountability for what needs to get done and when.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>BUDGET: Determining expenses and sources of funding.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ While you might be able to avoid spending money on your campaign, choosing to employ strategies or channels that require you to pay may be your best option. If that’s the case, determine in advance how much everything will cost and where your funding will come from.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>EVALUATION: How will you measure the accomplishment of your objectives and know that you were successful?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▶ There needs to be a way to gauge your success and what could be done better, such as holding team meetings to discuss the pros and cons of the plan.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Once you have determined these aspects of your campaign, you need to develop a written communications plan to tell others about your project.
Before you can choose methods and create strategies for your media campaign, you need to answer questions about the ideas and messages you are crafting. Here are a few sample questions that will help you think about various aspects of your project. While you may have more questions that need answers for your specific campaign, these questions can serve as a guide for what you need to consider for your communications plan.

Who?
- Who needs to know?
- Who does this impact?
- Who is leading/hosting the program?
- Who do you want to participate?
- Who is your target audience(s)?
- Who are your stakeholders?
- Who is the decision maker?
- Who are the partners?

What?
- What are the key messages?
- What impact does this have in the community?
- What do you want to accomplish?
- What do you want people to do or learn?
- What does the research say?
- What are the objectives?

How?
- How much of an impact will this make?
- How long will the media campaign last?
- How can people register?
- How will you measure success?
- How will you achieve an objective?

Where?
- Where will this take place?
- Where can people register?
- Where is your target audience getting their information?

Why?
- Why are you doing this?
- Why does this matter?
- Why should people attend?
- Why should your project or message be promoted?

When?
- When will this take place?
- When should people know about it?
- When will you see results?
- When can people register?
COMMUNICATION METHODS AND STRATEGIES

Choosing effective communication methods is imperative.

In order to share the message of your campaign effectively, it is important to distinguish the differences between communicating, promoting and publicizing your message for your target audience.

Choosing effective communication methods is imperative before, during and after your project.

Moving forward in your communication plan, it is important to choose effective strategies and the proper information channels to share your message with your audience. Three major strategies that are best for implementing your media campaign include community outreach, social media and media relations.

- MARKETING
  - Sharing the value of your project
  - Assessing your community and understanding its problems and trends
  - Communicating the right message to the right target audience

  Example: A social media post promoting registration for a project event

- PUBLIC RELATIONS
  - Managing the spread of information about your project
  - Using specific prevention messages
  - Sharing the successes of your project through third party sources

  Example: A press release announcing the launch of your project

- ADVERTISING
  - Communicating your prevention message
  - Raising awareness about a problem
  - Encouraging the audience to take action
  - Persuading an audience to think about their behaviors and consider change

  Example: A public service announcement

Some things to think about, are you paying someone to send out your message? Are you sending information to the media for them to publish? Are you talking directly to your audience? Are you attempting to raise funds or promote your project? Your overall goals and budget for your campaign will affect the methods you use to relay your message.
COMMUNITY OUTREACH

Community outreach is a powerful way to spread the word about your project directly to your audience. It can include word of mouth from influential people, speaking engagements, partnerships with different organizations and communications materials.

WORD OF MOUTH
- Parents
- Teachers
- School counselors
- Town/county communications specialists
- School system communications specialists
- Business leaders
- School board members and administrators
- Politicians and legislators

PARTNERSHIPS
- Law enforcement agencies
- Community leaders
- Legislative representatives
- Nonprofits
- Local government
- Businesses
- Community coalitions
- Local community service boards
- K-12 schools
- Colleges & Universities
- Media
- Virginia ABC

OTHER
- Billboards
- Displays
- Car magnets
- School marquee
- Stickers
- Buttons
- School yearbook
- Posters
- Flyers
- Brochures
- Church bulletins
- Newsletters
- Emails

▶ Remember, some of these methods might be free, but others may require money in the budget to execute.

Community outreach is a powerful way to spread the word!
Increasingly, people are getting important news and information from social media platforms.

SOCIAL MEDIA

- Increasingly, people are getting important news and information from social media platforms. These tools provide a low-cost way for you to speak directly to your audience and offer opportunities for others to support, share and give feedback about your campaign.

- Choose the correct platform for your audience and message.

- Know how to use the platform.

- Link to the website (if one exists).

- Tag appropriate partners.

- Encourage engagement by making posts easily sharable.

- Use photos and video.

- Use well-known hashtags (but check them first to make sure they work for your message!).

- Create an event and invite people.

- Encourage engagement by making posts easily sharable.

- Recognize and respond to comments and questions.

- Don't just talk about yourself.

- Engage in conversations that are relevant to your campaign.

- IF YOU HAVE AN ORGANIZATION PAGE, MEASURE ANALYTICS
MEDIA RELATIONS

When you need to contact the media, many factors come into play such as reaching out to the appropriate outlets for your audience, reaching out with a suitable timeline in mind and having the proper information and materials to send to those you are contacting.

EXAMPLES

• Before: “The event is happening August 1. Sign up by July 31 to attend.”

• During: “Our speaker is talking to high school students about how to be leaders amongst their friends.”

• After: “The event was a success! We made our goal and the governor attended.”

Choosing which media outlet to contact is highly dependent on your target audience. You want to choose the outlet from which your key demographic receives their information rather than waste your efforts with a media outlet that will not reach those you want to hear your message.
Remember the Rule of Seven:
People need to hear your message seven times to make it stick!

When contacting the media, it is best to have certain resources and tools at your disposal that make your campaign easier to report on and a higher-quality story for that outlet. Tools for contacting the media include:

PRESS RELEASES
- Written in full article form in a standard format that the media can cut and paste into publication.
- Includes an interesting introduction to catch the reader’s attention.
- Answers the basic questions (who, what, when, where, why, how) but also gives additional details.
- Includes quotes (which can have opinions).
- Can be included in the actual email or attached to the email.
- Can be uploaded on your website.

MEDIA ADVISORIES
- Written in bullet form.
- Answers the basic questions (who, what, when, where, why, how).
- Media can get a quick glance at the facts.
- Serves as a reminder, invitation, update or photo opportunity.
- Sent out two to four weeks before the event/campaign.

▸ A sample letter to the editor, press release and media advisory is included in the back of this toolkit for you to adapt and use.

MEDIA RELATIONS TIPS
- Provide all of the information you can so that the reporter doesn’t have to ask for anything. The more work they have to do, the less likely they will be to cover your story.
- Keep the material concise.
- Make sure that all materials include your logo and contact information.
- Connect the project locally. Explain how the identified problem is impacting your community.
- Materials should look and sound professional.
- Tell a story. If you can connect your prevention message to an individual’s experience, do it. It makes the information or topic seem more relatable.
- Make sure you explain your relationship to the project.
- It’s okay to follow up.
- If you do get media coverage, it’s always nice to thank the reporter for helping you promote your project and establish a relationship with them.
Dear Mr./Ms. [editor’s last name],

Introduction: Briefly provide important information about who you are. This will help the editor/readers understand your connection to the topic.

Supporting paragraph: Explain your reason for writing. This communication is different from a press release because you may express your point of view rather than sticking strictly to the facts. You are expected to give an opinion as this helps explain why you are writing to the editor.

Additional paragraph: Describe what action you are requesting (visit, read, attend, promote, etc.).

Close: Thank the person for considering your email for publication. Remember, if you are writing to the editor, you either want them to publish your letter or write their own opinion article about the issue addressed in your letter. The closing to your email will not show up in a printed version of the letter to the editor so do not include information important to the letter in the closing.

Sincerely,
First and last name
Title and organization (if applicable)

This document should be concise and succinct. Although it is called a “letter to the editor,” the best way to send this is by email.

For the editor to publish your note, it will need to be well written and brief to get your point across. The letter (email) should be submitted so the editor can take what is provided and use it as is.

Proofread your email when you are finished to make sure there are no spelling, grammar or punctuation errors.

MEDIA ADVISORY AND PHOTO OPPORTUNITY

Contact: Name, Title, Organization
          (ex: Clark Kent, Student Government Association President, Walter High School)

Clear Headline that Conveys Most Important Message Does Not Need to be Complete Sentence

[Just like a news release, covers the most important information, but in quick, easy-to-understand bursts. Write in short sentences. Stick to the facts. Cover all your key messages. Proofread before sending and ensure all information is accurate. If there will be a specific photo opportunity, include that information.

The who, what, when, where, why and how headings may be reordered, if necessary. A heading may also be left off if no information fits into that category as long as all of the important information and key messages are communicated in others areas.]

What:   What is happening? What do you want people to do (register, attend, read, click, etc.)? What’s in it for the reader?

Who:    Who is the advisory about? Who is the host? Who can participate? Who is impacted? Who is attending?

When:   When will this happen? When should people register? When will this take effect?

Where:  Where will this happen? Where should people register?

Why:    Why should people care? Why is this important for the community? Why is this happening now?

How:    How should people register? How much does it cost? How do they get more information? How will funding be used?

Clear Headline that Conveys Most Important Message in Release Does Not Need to be Complete Sentence

LOCATION – Lead. This paragraph must catch the reader’s attention. It introduces the person to the most important information in the news release. You will provide more details later in the release. The reader must be able to quickly determine if this release contains information important to them and their audience. If you don’t hook your reader here, they will not keep reading.

Supporting paragraphs. Write in clear sentences. Create a new paragraph for each new key message to keep paragraphs between two and four sentences. Within the first few paragraphs, explain the who, what, when, where, why and how.

The release should be written so a reporter can simply take what is provided and use it as is. Provide all the details needed—don’t make the reporter have to ask for anything. Stick to the facts. Cover your key messages. Make sure all information provided is accurate (ex: address, spelling of someone’s name, full organization name, correct title). Proofread your release when you are finished to make sure there are no spelling, grammar or punctuation errors.

“Include a quote from someone related to the subject you are discussing in your release,” said Walter High School Principal Minnie Mouse (give the name and title of the person you are quoting). “The quote is where you can include opinions (ex: This program is the best one I’ve seen all year.). Remember to make sure the person you are quoting in the release knows you are quoting them and has approved the quote.”

To wrap up the release, provide any additional information or directions needed for follow up, registration, resources, etc. (ex: To register for the dance party, visit www.walterhighschooldanceparty.com.) Any information placed this low in the news release should be less important than what was included in the opening paragraphs.

“A release can have more than one quote, if needed,” said Walter High School Counselor Mickey Mouse. “You do not need to include a quote from more than one person, but you may if it helps tell the story. You may also include another statement from the person you quoted earlier in the release. Putting a quote at the end of a release can add a positive closure, leaving the reader with an impactful and memorable takeaway.”
